致同学们

亲爱的同学们：

本册为必修第二册，共有四个核心主题（No limits、Roads to education、Progress?、Achievements）。同学们在这四个主题语境的引领下开展听说读写看的活动。

本册教材共由四个单元组成，每个单元有五个板块，各板块的具体内容和学习方式如下：

- Reading and interaction 是单元的核心内容，其中的主课文搭建了一个活动丰富的学习平台，供同学们研读文章的思想内容和语言特点。同学们可以据此联系生活实际，开展听说读写的综合性交际活动，全面提高语言能力、思维品质，把握文化内涵，提升文化意识和学习能力。
- Grammar activity 是《普通高中英语课程标准（2017年版）》（以下简称《课程标准》）所规定的相关语法学习内容，其中的语法范例展示了语法知识的特点，随后的语法合作学习活动将帮助你们建立规范和得体的语法知识体系，发展有效的语法应用能力。
- Listening and speaking 分为听力活动和口语活动。听力活动之前有丰富的听前准备活动，同学们准备得越充分，听力学习的成效就越大；口语活动和听力活动紧密相依，为同学们创造了听说相结合的训练机会。
- Writing 为同学们提供了发展写作能力的机会。在教师的指导下，同学们可以首先根据问题提示研究范文在内容、语言和文本编辑方面的特点，然后开展独立的写作训练。
- Cultural focus 提供了丰富的优秀中华文化和世界其他国家及地区的文化内容。同学们通过学习这些内容，理解丰富多彩的文化现象和文化特点，提升文化意识和文化比较能力，加强对中国文化的自信，树立家国情怀，培养人类命运共同体的理念，将价值塑造、知识传授和能力培养三者融为一体。本板块还有一个视频学习项目，蕴含丰富的语言和文化内容，同学们通过视听学习，能够有效地提升“看英语”的能力。

本套教材还有以下特点：

- 丰富的学习活动助你改进学习方式

《课程标准》提倡通过活动来提高语言学习效能。为此，本套教材含有大量的综合性语言交际活动，有助于同学们不断改进学习方式，主动、积极地参与到合作探究的学习活动中去。

- “学习目标”和“自我评价”手段有助于提高“教学评”一体化程度

明确的学习目标和准确的自我评价是保证“教学评”一体化的重要条件。本套教材为同学们提供了两个助学工具：(1) 单元开始时的“学习目标”提出了各个板块的学习内容和期望达成的学习结果；(2) 单元结束时的自我评价活动可以帮助同学们准确地评价自己的学习成果，并据此规划下一步的学习目标。

成功的英语学习需要建立在强有力的动机、合理的学习方式和持之以恒的努力之上。希望同学们在新的学习阶段中，积极参加各种交际活动，用耐心和恒心铺就成功之道。预祝同学们学习成功！

LIMITS

Objectives

A Reading and interaction

- Identify reasons for teenagers' risk-taking and reflect on your own behaviour

B Grammar activity

- Use ellipsis correctly in the given context

C Listening and speaking

- Explain common and uncommon fears

D Writing

- Write a description of a person you admire using appropriate language and format

E Cultural focus

- Retell the story of Scott's Hut
- Describe one extreme sport in Queenstown

A Reading and interaction

Pre-reading activity

- 1 Look at the photos on pages 6 and 7 and discuss statements a–d with your classmates. Do you agree with them?
 - a Small children take more risks than teenagers.
 - b Boys take fewer risks than girls.
 - c Teenagers often take risks when they want to be part of a group.
 - d Seventeen-year-olds take more risks than younger teenagers.
- 2 Look at the title and subheadings. Predict what the passage is about.
 - a Studying the brain
 - b Visiting a theme park
 - c Taking risks

It's a fact: many teenagers take more risks than children and adults. The question is, why? Check out the latest studies and think about what you can do about it.

5 The “wow” factor

Have you ever been on a roller-coaster ride^①? How did you feel when you got off? Excited? Amazed? This is the “wow” factor, the feeling of pleasure we get when we take and survive
 10 a risk. Scientists know that a brain chemical called dopamine^② causes this feeling of enjoyment. What has dopamine got to do with you? Well, some scientists believe that dopamine levels are sometimes lower in 15 teenagers than they are in children. This means that some teenagers might need to take more risks to get the same “wow” factor.

① a roller-coaster /'rəʊlə,kəʊstə(r)/ ride 乘坐过山车 ② dopamine /'dəʊpəmi:n/ n. 多巴胺

“I just felt like it”

Have you ever done something dangerous or 20 frightening without thinking about what happens next? When an adult asks a teenager, “What were you thinking of when you did that?” a common reply is,
 “I just felt like it.” But the question misses the point, because the point is that the teenager might not 25 have been thinking at all! The teenager didn’t plan to take a risk: it just “happened”. A few years ago, scientists made a surprising discovery: the teenage brain goes through many physical changes, and some parts of it develop later than others. The last 30 part to fully develop is the frontal cortex^①. This is the area of the brain which allows us to do things such as controlling feelings and making good decisions.

Pressure from friends

Have you ever taken a risk to impress your friends? Even teenagers who are not usually 35 big risk-takers may suddenly do something dangerous because they want to show off or fit in. If you look at statistics, boys often take more risks than girls, perhaps because they don’t want to look bad in front of their friends—though girls dislike that too. Boys are more likely not to wear seat belts, more likely to get into an argument or a fight, and more likely to smoke and drink. But is taking risks really the best way to get people to respect, 40 notice and like you?

What you can do

There’s no easy solution, but try to make good choices and be independent. Don’t get pushed into doing things by your friends. You can get your dopamine fix in lots of other exciting ways. Roller coasters, skateboarding and surfing will all give you the same “wow” 45 factor. And if you’re around 17, stop worrying, because your brain has reached the point where you can more easily make wise decisions. You’ve survived up until now, so you’ve achieved a lot—well done!

Note: This passage is heavily adapted from a section of Blame My Brain—The Amazing Teenage Brain Revealed by Nicola Morgan. The author is not responsible for the wording of this passage. For a clear understanding of the science, readers should refer to the original book.

① frontal cortex /'frʌntl 'kɔ:tɛks/ (额叶)皮层

A Reading and interaction

Comprehension work

1 Read the passage and answer the questions.

(1) How do teenagers feel when they have taken and survived a risk?

(2) What causes the feeling of enjoyment according to the writer?

.....

(3) Why do teenagers take more risks than children and adults?

.....

(4) What are teenagers probably thinking of when they take risks?

.....

(5) Why do some teenagers become risk-takers?

.....

(6) What are the writer's suggestions for teenagers?

2 Read the summary below and fill in each blank with a suitable word based on the language of the passage. You may change the form if necessary.

The passage explains the reasons why teenagers usually take more risks than children and adults, and offers some suggestions on how to deal with teenage problems.

Scientists believe that teenage risk-taking is closely related to the levels of a brain ¹ called dopamine, which causes feelings of ²

Teenagers are found to have ³ levels of dopamine than children, so they have to take more ⁴ to experience the same excitement.

Scientists also believe that teenagers are more likely to do ⁵ things without thinking about the results due to the ⁶ changes in their brains.

Their frontal cortex is not fully ⁷, so their ability to make good decisions is limited. Pressure from friends is the third factor that turns teenagers into ⁸: they have a strong need to look good in front of their friends.

They also try to earn ⁹ from their friends by doing dangerous things such as fighting or not wearing seat belts. Experts suggest that there are no easy ¹⁰ to these problems. Teenagers should try to make good decisions, act independently and find safe sources of excitement.

Deep reading

1 The writer uses a number of communicative strategies to make the ideas convincing and reasonable. Work in pairs. Study strategies a–d, match them to sentences (1)–(4), and give reasons. Pay attention to the words in bold. You may use the example below to help you.

- a To choose a good source and use the present tense to indicate that the information is reliable, and that it is a general truth.
- b To use certain words to suggest that the current information is true to some extent.
- c To use certain expressions to invite readers to join in a dialogue with the writer.
- d To suggest that readers use their own judgement about an issue.

Scientists know that a brain chemical called dopamine causes this feeling of enjoyment.

You may ask and respond like this:

A: What do you think of this sentence?

B: Here, the writer clearly shows that this is an important piece of information. But I'm not sure about what strategy she used. What do you think?

A: From what I can see, its strategy is a. Using the word “scientists” here means it is a good information source.

B: I agree. And the present tense of the verb “cause” suggests that the information is true.

Sentences in the passage	Strategies	My understanding
(1) ... some scientists believe that dopamine levels are sometimes lower in teenagers than they are in children.
(2) Even teenagers who are not usually big risk-takers may suddenly do something dangerous because they want to show off or fit in.
(3) Boys are more likely not to wear seat belts, more likely to get into an argument or a fight, and more likely to smoke and drink.
(4) But is taking risks really the best way to get people to respect, notice and like you?

A Reading and interaction

2 Work in pairs and discuss the questions.

(1) Do you think taking risks is the best way to get people to respect you? Why or why not?

(2) What is your impression of those teenagers who do dangerous things? Why?

.....

Mini-project

Conducting a survey about risk-taking

You are going to do a survey on teenage risk-taking.

- Interview at least three classmates by asking the questions below and note down their answers.

What is the greatest risk you have ever taken?

How did you feel?

Will you do it again? Why or why not?

- Fill in the table and share your findings with the class.

Name	Greatest risk	Feelings	Reasons to do / not to do it again
Wang Li	A roller-coaster ride	He was afraid at first. Then he was excited.	He will do it again, because he thinks it helps him become braver and builds up his confidence.

Focus on language

1 Read the passage again. Find out what the pronouns in bold in the passage refer to.

- | | |

| (4) it (line 26) | (8) their (line 37) |

2 Find the adjectives ending in -ed or -ing in the passage. Then write them in the blanks.

- (1) Which adjectives describe how someone feels?

.....

.....

- (2) Which adjectives describe what someone or something is like?

.....

.....

.....

3 Complete the sentences with the correct forms of the phrases below.

- | | | | |
|-----------------|----------------------|-------------------|-----------------|
| ■ take the risk | ■ make a decision | ■ respect ... for | ■ blame ... for |
| ■ show off | ■ be responsible for | ■ get into | ■ check out |

B Grammar activity

Ellipsis

Ellipsis is the act of leaving out some parts of a sentence.

—Who would like to go swimming with me on Sunday?

—I would like to (go swimming with you on Sunday).

(You don't have to repeat the words in brackets.)

⇒ Grammar reference 1 (p. 87)

1 Read the transcript of a TV show. Find out what information the speakers left out in parts 1–6. Match them to grammar rules a and b.

Presenter: Today on Challenges we are talking to climbing instructor Marco Black about young adventurers and the risks they take. So Marco, why are adventurers becoming younger?

Marco: Well, people have already explored most places on Earth. They've climbed the highest mountains, they've visited the driest deserts and they've travelled across the sea. Today, it isn't a race to be the first any more; it's a race to be the youngest. Sixteen-year-old Jordan Romero is a good example.

Presenter: How many mountains has Jordan climbed?

Marco: Well, he's climbed the seven highest mountains in the world, including Qomolangma.

Presenter: When did he climb Qomolangma?

Marco: Several years ago, in 2010.

Presenter: And how old was he then?

Marco: Only 13 years old!

Presenter: That's an amazing achievement! ¹I'm surprised that his parents allowed him to.

Marco: Well, actually his dad climbed with him.

Presenter: Oh, OK. But surely he must have been afraid.

Marco: ²Why would he be? Jordan comes from a family of climbers and he has great dreams. He decided to climb Qomolangma when he was nine years old, after he saw a picture at school of each continent's highest mountain. He's even been to Antarctica!

Presenter: But 13 is very young. Wasn't he too young to climb Qomolangma?

Marco: Perhaps he was ... Some young adventurers don't understand the risks they're taking, but then Jordan was well-prepared.

Presenter: Marco, have you ever climbed a mountain with someone as young as Jordan?

Marco: ³I haven't, ⁴and no one has ever asked me to.

Presenter: Finally, would you like to climb Qomolangma yourself?

Marco: ⁵Of course I would! It's every climber's dream. It's expensive and requires a lot of preparation, but I hope that ⁶someday I'll be able to.

a Ellipsis can be used to avoid repeating information after modal verbs and other auxiliary verbs.

b Ellipsis can also be used to avoid repeating information after certain verb structures that are followed by the to-infinitive.

2 Use ellipsis to rewrite sentences 1–4. The first one has been done for you.

This month's cool explorers

- A: Most people have never visited the North Pole, but Parker Liataud has. At the age of 15, Parker skied 130 km across the Arctic in freezing temperatures.
- B: Wow. I probably would have quit after about 2 km.
- A: I would've quit after about 2 km, too! ¹ I would have, too.
- B: In the same year, he also started a social media page about global warming. In fact, Parker later studied environmental issues to become a scientist.
- A: By the way, have you ever been to the South Pole?
- B: No, but it must be an amazing place.
- A: That's right! I assume you'd like to go there someday?
- B: Yes, I'd love to go there someday. ²
- But let's talk about someone who has been to the South Pole.
- A: That's right! Katie Walter walked there and back in 20 days in 2009. She was only 17 years old and she made a lot of money for charity.
- B: And even though some teen adventurers might stop after just one pole, an Australian teenager named Jade Hameister wasn't ready to stop after reaching the North Pole. ³
- A: Yes, this 16-year-old girl has skied to both the North and South Pole, and she's also crossed the Greenland ice sheet. Her next challenge? Get through the last two years of school!
- B: I'm sure she can finish the last two years of school! ⁴

3 Work in groups. Think of three things you would like to do this weekend and turn them into yes / no questions. Write your sentences in the blanks. You may use the example below and the expressions in brackets to help you.

I would like to go mountain climbing this weekend. → Would you like to go mountain climbing this weekend with me?

- (1) (watch a film) →
- (2) (organize community activities) →
- (3) →

Now ask at least three classmates if they would like to join you, and report your findings to the class.

■ You may ask and respond like this:

A: Would you like to go rowing this weekend with me?

B: Yes, I would (like to). / No, I wouldn't (like to).

■ You may report like this: I asked three classmates. Linlin agreed to go rowing with me, but the rest would not.

C Listening and speaking

1 Before you listen, guess the word from the clues below. Then listen for the answer in the introduction and write it down. 🎧

- The word means a strong fear of something, often something that is not dangerous at all.
- The word has the head of photo, and the end of Columbia.

The word is

2 Listen to the introduction again and circle the correct answers from the list below. 🎧

Why do some people have this kind of uncommon fear?

- a Children may learn this behaviour from their parents.
- b It is likely caused by imagination.
- c It may be caused by bad childhood experiences.
- d It is the result of some diseases.
- e They might inherit^① the genes^② for this type of fear from their parents.

3 Listen to three people talking about their fears and complete the table. 🎧

Speaker	Fear (of)	Physical reactions
A	(1)	He feels dizzy and (2) He (3), though he knows he is not in danger.
B	(4)	She felt (5) Her mum was (6) Her brother thought (7)
C	Fear of closed spaces	When the doors closed, he felt (8)

① inherit /ɪn'heɪt/ v. 经遗传获得 ② gene /dʒi:n/ n. 基因

4 Work in groups. Discuss and decide on the most and least common fears. You may follow the steps below.

- List two things that you are afraid of. You may refer to the examples or use your own ideas.

- Share ideas within your group.
- Decide on the most and least common fears in your group and explain the reasons.
- Select one person to report on behalf of your group.

Make your list here!

Language guide

You may introduce your ideas like this:

- The two things I listed are ...
- Here is my list of fears. They are ...
- I think ... is the most / least common fear.

You may explain the reasons and discuss the decision like this:

- This is because people may feel ... when ...
- It is ridiculous^② / unbelievable ...
- It is the most / least common fear because ...
- If people fear ..., it would be ...
- How could that be?
- I agree. That's the most ...
- This kind of fear is not as ... as ...

D Writing

My page

This month's competition is all about inspirational people.

- Write a description of a person you admire. It can be a famous person, a friend or a member of your family.
- Say why they are special and what they have achieved.
- Send in your description with a photo by Friday.
- Winners will get a copy of a recent best-selling book.

1 Read the competition announcement from a magazine above. You may prepare your writing by thinking about the questions.

(1) What is the topic of the writing competition?

(2) What can be included in the description?

2 Read the sample entry. Then complete the table on page 17 before you write.

Grandpa Lu is a person I admire. He shows that old people can achieve amazing things, just like young people. He swam in the river 320 times last year. That's an incredible achievement!

Grandpa Lu started winter swimming late in life. He was already 82 years old when he did his first winter swim, and you may wonder why. After his wife died, Grandpa Lu moved to Harbin to be closer to his son. He wanted something to focus on and swimming provided that. Grandpa Lu did his first winter swim in 2016 and since then he has continued swimming in winter every year. He has never considered giving it up. He's also made lots of swimming friends and he's made money for charity by swimming too.

Grandpa Lu is the oldest person who regularly swims in winter in our city. And that's why he's special. "If the weather is not too bad, I will go swimming," said Grandpa Lu. "I started to swim out of curiosity, and then I found that I just couldn't stop."

E Cultural focus

The human spirit truly has no bounds. People, especially the young, have always been pushing the limits of what is possible, whether it is doing sports or exploring new places. In this section, you will first read a passage about the exploration of Antarctica. You will then watch a video about extreme sports in Queenstown, New Zealand.

1 Work in pairs and do the quiz about the Antarctic. Then read the passage and check your answers.

- (1) The Antarctic is than the Arctic.
a colder b less cold
- (2) Thousands of live there.
a polar bears b penguins^①
- (3) The Inuit people have lived there.
a never b always
- (4) It's dark
a all year round b for half the year
- (5) It's the place on Earth.
a wettest b driest

Eyewitness account: Scott's Hut^②

Brita Harding is a scientist and she's been in Antarctica for five weeks. She is working in a small building called Scott's Hut and is helping to preserve it. The British explorer Captain Robert Scott used the hut as a base camp in 1911.

"The Antarctic is the driest, coldest and windiest continent in the world. It's dark for six months of the year and not many animals live here, apart from penguins. There are no native people like the Inuits, and tourists never stop off to explore. It's easy to understand why. It isn't the best place to live and work and it's freezing at the moment—we've had temperatures of -73°C since Monday!

① penguin /'pɛŋgwɪn/ n. 企鹅 ② hut /hʌt/ n. 小屋

Every day, I go down to Ross Island and work in Scott's Hut with other scientists. Inside there are books, wooden skis, biscuits, penguins' eggs and many other interesting things. All these things have been here for a hundred years and they're 15 completely frozen. That's why we want to save the hut—it brings Scott's expedition^① to life!

The race to the South Pole is a famous story. Captain Scott and a Norwegian^② explorer called Roald Amundsen both wanted to get there first. They both prepared for many months, but in the end their strategies for reaching the pole were very 20 different: Amundsen used dogs to pull his sleds and Scott used motorized sleds^③ and horses. Amundsen had good weather during his expedition, but Scott had bad weather. When Scott's team set out from the hut on 1 November 1911, there were terrible snowstorms and the sleds broke down. After a few weeks, the horses died and most of his team turned back. In the end, only five men carried on to the South
25 Pole: Scott, Oates, Evans, Bowers and Wilson.

On 17 January 1912, Scott's team reached the Pole and came across the Norwegian flag—Amundsen's team were there before them and were already racing back to tell the world. Tired and disappointed, Scott's team made their way back home, but they ran out of food and got lost in snowstorms; they did not make it.

30 In Scott's Hut, there is a pair of old explorer's boots. Scott wore these boots for years and they are dirty and broken, but they're very special too. They tell us Scott's story—that he was hard-working, ambitious and determined, and that he pushed himself to the limit. Although the attempt was unsuccessful, Scott never gave up, and that's an amazing achievement."

① expedition /ˌɛkspə'dɪʃn/ n. 探险; 考察 ② Norwegian /nɔ:'wi:dʒən/ adj. 挪威的; 挪威人的

Self-assessment

Use the checklist and reflective questions below to evaluate your study in this unit.

Checklist*	1 Me	2 My teacher / classmate	3 Action
A Reading and interaction
• I can relate the scientific explanations about teenagers' acts of risk-taking to my own life.
• I can identify the communicative strategies the writer uses to make the ideas convincing and reasonable.
• I can describe one of my classmates' risk-taking behaviour based on the information from the survey.
B Grammar activity
• I can recognize the forms and rules of ellipsis.
• I can use elliptical structures correctly if the context is clear.
C Listening and speaking
• I can identify different types of fears and understand their causes.
• I can explain some common and uncommon fears.
D Writing
• I can identify the aspects and the features of language to describe a person in the sample writing.
• I can write about a person I admire with supporting details and explanations in suitable language.
E Cultural focus
• I can retell the story of Scott's Hut based on the passage.
• I can introduce at least one extreme sport in Queenstown.

Reflective questions

Are you satisfied with your contributions to the survey task in the mini-project? How do you feel about working with your classmates? Why?

The best programme on TV last night was the first episode of a new series about education, and it was set on a farm.

But this farm is not for animals; it's for children. The farm has been converted^① into a school for one class of difficult students. And it's the job of one man to try and teach these students something in the two weeks they are there.

The class is a group of 16 boys and girls, aged 13 and 14, who have all been expelled^② from schools at least once. Their previous teachers said that they were "unteachable" and, judging by their behaviour in the programme last night, it isn't hard to see why. The teacher who has to deal with this class is 40-year-old Philip Beadle. Before working in education, Mr Beadle played in a rock band. He gave up music eight years ago to become a teacher. At his first school, he helped his students to get the best English marks the school had ever seen. As a result, he was made Schoolteacher of the Year.

In the programme last night, we saw the students have their first lesson with Mr Beadle.

25 He started by playing a game, where he and the students pointed at each other and said something funny about the other person. This might not sound very educational, but it caught everyone's attention. After that, Mr Beadle took his class outside for an English lesson. At their previous schools, most of these students refused to read in front of their classmates, so Mr Beadle took them to a field to read to some cows. Each student read
30 a brief quote from a Shakespeare play to them, and the students seemed to enjoy it. In the next scene, Mr Beadle took them to another field to teach them basic punctuation. He did this through another game where he asked the students to jump around, clap their hands and shout, "question mark!" and "semicolon!" Everyone seemed to enjoy this strange way of learning. By the end of the episode the students were indeed starting to 35 accept their new teacher. Some of them even said he was "all right".

I really enjoyed this show because the teacher had such a positive effect on the students. If, like me, you are amazed by this experiment in education, you'll want to watch the whole series. Personally, I can't wait to see what happens next!

1 Read the passage again. Study sentences (1)–(4) on page 27. They are about teaching and learning in the programme. Discuss the questions in pairs and complete the table. You may use the example below to help you.

The farm has been converted into a school for one class of difficult students.

Guiding question: How is the learning on the farm different from that in the classroom?

You may ask and respond like this:

A: What is your opinion about the differences?

B: It's more fun to learn on the farm—students are close to nature and relaxed. They have freedom to explore and discover new things. Don't you think so?

A: Exactly! They also improved their performance. What about learning in the classroom then?

Proposing the best way of studying

You are going to learn about the history of ancient China. Your teacher wants you to suggest different ways of studying.

- Discuss the questions in groups.

Which methods below would you like your teacher to use to help you study better? Why?

- a field trip to a local museum
- online research
- a lecture given by an expert
- visiting a university
- watching historical documentaries^①
- making posters
- reading history books or other documents in a library
- ...

What do you think is the best way to learn about the history of ancient China?

- Share ideas within your group.
- Select one person to report on behalf of your group.

My opinion

I think a field trip to a local museum is the best way of learning about the history of ancient China.

My opinion

My reasons

Museums provide many useful learning resources. For example, real historical objects are interesting to look at and make us eager to learn. In a museum, we can also find out about the latest discoveries about the past. The exhibitions are also frequently updated, so we get to learn something new each time we visit. Studying history is no longer dull^②, but interesting and connected to real life.

My reasons

① documentary /ˌdɒkjʊ'mentri/ n. 纪录片; 纪实广播(或电视)节目 ② dull /dʌl/ adj. 枯燥无味的; 沉闷的; 无聊的

Focus on language

1 Read the passage again. Complete the phrasal verbs with prepositions and then match them to meanings a–f.

- | | |
|------------------------------------|--|
| (1) be converted | a to influence somebody or something in a good way |
| (2) be expelled | b to be forced to leave |
| (3) deal | c to hold up one finger towards something |
| (4) point | d to be greatly surprised by something or someone |
| (5) have (a positive) effect | e to be changed into something that can be used for a different purpose |
| (6) be amazed | f to take necessary actions to solve a problem |

2 Complete the passage with the correct form of the phrases below.

- | | | |
|----------------|-----------------------------|-------------------------|
| ■ judge by | ■ deal with | ■ catch one's attention |
| ■ be amazed by | ■ have a positive effect on | ■ in brief |

Yu Yi, who was made "People's Educator" in 2019, has dedicated^① her life to her work. She has inspired many young teachers who ¹ develop their skills, and I am one of them. Yesterday, I was lucky enough to hear her give a speech on education. I ² to share her ideas with you!

³, her speech was about the changing role of teachers and schools. Schools need to keep up with the times, and teachers who refuse to change will not be successful. Education needs to ⁴ children's lives, and provide them with the tools they need to ⁵ difficulties when they grow up.

The students who some people describe as "unteachable" are actually eager to learn. However, teachers need to ⁶ with interesting and lively lessons, otherwise their students will not be motivated. Teachers also have to be well prepared. While in class, they should make sure that their students understand and pay attention.

⁷ the mood in the room, the audience loved her speech.

I ⁸ Yu Yi's deep knowledge and love of education. Even in her nineties, she is still helping teachers and students grow their talents, and this is why I see Yu Yi as a role model.

B Grammar activity

The verb-ing and verb-ed forms as the attributive

The verb-ing and verb-ed forms can act like an adjective when placed before or after a noun phrase to provide additional information about it.

(1) a stepping stone

(2) A newly built bridge was damaged in a hurricane.

(3) The problem facing the parents was soon noticed by the government.

(4) The idea suggested by the teacher was supported by the villagers.

⇒ Grammar reference 2 (p. 88)

⇒ Grammar reference 3 (p. 89)

1 Read the report. Match verb-ing and verb-ed forms 1–5 to grammar rules a–d.

The road to education is sometimes a very narrow path. This was true in more ways than one for ¹the children living in Pili village, Xinjiang. Twice a year they travelled through the mountains to a school in Taxkorgan, the biggest town in the county. Pili used to be ²a village cut off from the world: there were no roads, so the children needed to walk across the mountains and rivers in order to reach their school.

The most dangerous part of this journey was a narrow path just next to a 300-metre drop. If children were not careful enough, they would fall into the valley below. And the danger didn't end there. After the mountain path, there were narrow bridges over deep rivers. Luckily, there were never any serious accidents.

These problems were recognized by the government, which came to their aid. ³A new road connecting Pili with Taxkorgan was finally opened in 2014. It makes the journey to school shorter, faster and safer. The children can now go there by bus instead of walking: ⁴the travelling time is now only four hours. In fact, ⁵the newly built road is good for everyone in Pili village. It is now much easier for families to buy things they need and visit relatives in other villages.

a The verb-ing form before a noun phrase indicates how something is used, or what someone is doing.

b The verb-ed form before a noun phrase indicates an action has been done to something / someone.

c The verb-ing form after a noun phrase indicates what something / someone is doing, or functioning as.

d The verb-ed form after a noun phrase indicates a state something / someone is in, and usually has a passive meaning.

2 Complete the passage with verb-ing or verb-ed forms of the words below.

- live ■ donate ■ work ■ make ■ study ■ locate ■ teach (x2)

This week's amazing story comes all the way from India. It is about a teenager
 1 a huge difference in a small village 2
 in West Bengal!

It's two o'clock in the afternoon and 16-year-old Babar Ali has just returned from school in West Bengal. He can't relax just yet, though: he still needs to teach the children in his village. Babar Ali has got his own school—he's the world's youngest head teacher and he is in charge of several hundreds of children. The lessons 3 here are often based on what he learnt earlier in the day.

The students 4 at his school all come from poor families. Their parents can't afford to send them to school, so Babar Ali gives them free lessons. He is very busy, as there are a lot of children 5 in this village. Fortunately, he is not the only teacher 6 in the school: ten other students help him give classes to around 800 pupils.

Babar Ali has received a lot of support. He is especially thankful to the people who provide money and 7 materials. It is not easy to run a free school, and the 8 textbooks and school supplies will allow him to continue his work.

3 Look around your classroom and out of the windows. Describe three things creatively using either the verb-ing or verb-ed form as the attributive. You may use the example below and the expressions in brackets to help you.

Outside of the window, I see the falling leaves dancing in the wind. / In the classroom, the white crowded words on the board stand together waiting to be read.

(1) (some clouds ... strangely shaped)

(2) (birds ... singing)

(3)

Now ask your partner about his / her descriptions. Select the most creative one and report to the class.

- You may ask questions like this: What do you see?
- You may respond like this: I see a little singing bird in the tree. Maybe it's enjoying the shining morning sun.
- You may report like this: I think Lili's description of a devoted teacher is the most creative. She said, "In our classroom, the big blackboard turned a smiling girl into a middle-aged, tired woman."

C Listening and speaking

1 Think of things that most children like to do. Read the clues below to guess what the listening is going to be about. Then listen to find out the answer. 🎧

2 Read the sample essay about school uniforms. Then complete the table on page 35 before you write.

What are the arguments for and against school uniforms?

There have always been a lot of arguments about school uniforms. People have different opinions on whether school uniforms should be a necessary part of school life.

A survey shows that 65% of students don't like them. Many of them think school uniforms are boring because everyone looks the same in a uniform, which means they can't express themselves.

Still, others argue that school uniforms can save parents money because they are cheaper than fashionable clothes. Besides, wearing school uniforms will help to reduce pressure in students' daily lives: if students all wear the same uniform, they won't be judged by the clothes they wear. Most importantly, school uniforms express a group identity and a sense of belonging, which encourages students to take pride in their school.

To sum up, while school uniforms prevent one form of self-expression, they play a positive role in students' school life. Therefore, I believe school uniforms are a good idea.

Aspects of writing	Guiding questions	My exploration
Content	What is the purpose of the introductory paragraph?
	How many arguments for and against school uniforms does the writer mention? What are they?
	What is the writer's conclusion in the last paragraph?
Language	What language does the writer use to signal the central ideas of the "for" and "against" paragraphs?
	What language does the writer use to compare ideas?
	What phrases does the writer use to summarize his / her point of view in the last paragraph?
Editing	How are colons used in the essay?

3 Now write your own for and against essay.

E Cultural focus

Education can change a person's life. At school, students learn how to take in new knowledge, how to take responsibility, how to reflect on themselves and the world, and how to pursue their dreams.

In this section, you will first read a poem by Brian Patten about the influence a geography teacher had on his student. You will then watch a video about what high school life in America is like.

- 1 People are often inspired by teachers or parents when setting life goals. Look at the goals below. Choose the ones you think people often achieve before they are 21 and discuss who may influence them the most.

- 2 Read the poem on page 37 and complete the table.

The Geography Lesson

By Brian Patten (1946—)

Our teacher told us one day he would leave
And sail across a warm blue sea
To places he had only known from maps,
And all his life had longed to be.

The house he lived in was narrow and grey
But in his mind's eye he could see
Sweet-smelling jasmine^① growing on the walls,
And green leaves burning on an orange tree.

He spoke of the lands he longed to visit,
Where it was never dull or cold.
I couldn't understand why he never left,
And shook off the school's tight hold.

Then halfway through his final term
he took ill and never returned.
He never got to that place on the map
Where the green leaves of the orange trees burned.

The maps were redrawn on the classroom wall;
His name forgotten, he faded away.
But a lesson he never knew he taught
Is with me to this day.

I travel to where the green leaves burn,
To where the ocean's glass-clear and blue,
To places our teacher taught me to love—
And which he never knew.

- 2 Look at the table below. Guess the world population of each year. Then find the information in the passage and complete the table.

World population growth
Year	Number
8000 BCE million
1805 CE billion
1927	2 billion
1987 billion
1999	6 billion
2011 billion
2100 billion

The world's population reached five billion on the day I was born. That was in Indonesia back in 1987, and my parents were amazed that there were so many people on the planet. However, since then the population has continued to increase at an alarming rate. In October 2011, the seven billionth baby was born, and experts predict that there will be ten billion of us before the end of this century.

A number as big as seven billion is hard to imagine. If you said "hello" to a different person every second, it would take you 222 years to greet everyone on the planet. If seven billion people made a human chain with their hands, the chain would go to the moon and back nine times.

The growth of our human population is surprising. For more than two million years, humans moved around, finding plants to eat and hunting animals for meat. Then, just 10,000 years ago, we invented agriculture. At that time, there were 25 only about five million humans, but this figure quickly doubled. The population reached a billion in 1805, and since then it has multiplied^① seven times. Experts believe that about 6% of all the humans that have ever lived are alive right now.

The human population has never been bigger, but in some ways the planet seems to be getting significantly smaller. In the past, travellers from Europe to Indonesia
30 spent months at sea. Now you just have to sit on a plane for a few hours. When you arrived in another country a hundred years ago, you saw unfamiliar styles of clothing and buildings and discovered a completely different culture. In many places today, clothing and new buildings are very similar, and people enjoy the same sports, music, films and TV shows. We also buy the same products—smartphones, big burgers and 35 T-shirts—from huge, global companies. Although we are on different continents, we are to a large extent starting to live the same lives.

Even the languages that we use are becoming more global. There are around seven thousand languages in use today, but the number is decreasing fast. I grew up in a small village where everyone spoke Baras, one of Indonesia's local languages.
40 Today, like most of the youth from my village, I live in the capital, Jakarta, and speak Indonesian there. The only regular Baras speakers at present are the older people who have stayed in the country, so the language is threatened with extinction. The same thing is happening around the world. Experts think that the number of different languages will halve to just 3,500 by the end of this century.

45 Where will it stop? Will there be a time in the future when Earth's billions all speak just one language, and there are no cultural differences to divide us? Perhaps the planet would be more peaceful if this happened, but I must admit that the idea is quite disappointing, somehow. I prefer to think that, as our population grows, we can celebrate not the similarity but the wonderful differences of the human race.

Deep reading

- 1 Read the passage again. Study sentences (1)–(4) and think about how the writer makes his argument. Complete the table in pairs. Pay attention to the words in bold. You may use the example below to help you.

In October 2011, the seven billionth baby was born, and experts predict that there will be ten billion of us before the end of this century.

Guiding question: Why does the writer mention these figures?

You may ask and respond like this:

A: Why does the writer mention those figures in the passage?

B: Which figures?

A: “Seven billionth” and “ten billion”.

B: I think the writer wants to say something about the growth of the population.

A: I think you’re absolutely right. These figures will make it easier for us to understand the alarming rate of increase.

B: Yes. And they also make the writer’s argument stronger.

1 Some verbs are used to talk about statistics. Find these verbs in the passage with the help of the definitions below and write them in the blanks.

- (1) to reduce something by a half
 (2) to become twice as much or as many as
 (3) to become smaller in number or size
 (4) to increase by a large number or amount
 (5) to become or make something greater in number, amount, value, etc.

2 Replace the words and phrases in italics with the correct form of the words below.

- divide ■ increase ■ extinction ■ double
 ■ decrease ■ halve ■ rate ■ extent

During the 21st century, the world population has grown at an average ¹*speed* of around 1.2% per year. To some ²*degree*, all countries will see changes in population over the coming decades. However, these changes will be different from country to country.

There are some countries that population experts are especially interested in, and these can be ³*separated* into two groups: those where the population is rapidly getting bigger, and those where it is getting smaller. Many of the world's countries are in the first group. The population has ⁴*become a bigger number* most rapidly in Africa and parts of Asia. For example, in Myanmar, there were 27.9 million people in 1971, but now there are 56.5 million: the population has ⁵*become twice as big*.

Japan and several countries in Eastern Europe are in the second group. The population of Ukraine ⁶*became a smaller number* from 52 million in 1990 to 43.9 million in 2020. Experts have calculated that, in Europe as a whole, the number of births per woman ⁷*became twice as small* from about 2.8 in 1950 to 1.4 in 2005.

High population growth can have a negative impact on the environment: for example, some wild animals may be threatened with ⁸*dying out completely*. Countries with falling populations may face different problems. They will have a larger share of elderly people and fewer people of working age, and this may be bad for the economy. However, if governments start preparing for the future, these problems will be less serious.

1 Read the passage. Match clauses 1–4 to grammar rules a and b and complete rule a.

The young entrepreneur's^① guide

Lots of people dream of having their own business, but what do they have to do to become entrepreneurs?

Have a cool business idea

You'll enjoy your business more if it does something that really interests you, so use your hobbies for ideas. Sixteen-year-old Michelle Coakley from Ireland loved jewellery^② and her friend Jade Kearney was interested in environmental issues. ¹Sharing a creative spirit, Michelle and Jade decided to start their own fashion company. Together they designed and sold eco-friendly jewellery, but they faced many difficult challenges and had trouble finding customers at first. ²Not wanting to give up, the two girls worked incredibly hard and managed to sell €1,500 of jewellery in a short time!

Balance work and study

You have to work hard to build a business, but you mustn't forget your schoolwork either. Even if your business is successful, it's a good idea to graduate first, as you'll probably need some skills and knowledge in the future. There are exceptions, but they are not common. ³Being a skilled programmer, Bill Gates was able to start his own company and later became the world's richest man. However, he was already one of the best in his field when he gave up his studies. The lesson from this is that you need skills and knowledge, otherwise it will be hard to succeed!

Ask for help

You don't have to do all the work yourself. Family members are often happy to help, and school friends too. Plus, you don't have to limit yourself to people in your town. ⁴Having started out by writing a blog, Monik Pamecha ended up running a technology website in India with 26 writers from all around the world at the age of 13.

- a Clauses with verb-ing forms can be used to indicate the cause or reason for the action in the main clause. The negative form is + verb-ing.

The Santa Clara Valley, south-east of San Francisco, in California, is world-famous, but under a different name. ¹ a centre for electronics since the 1950s, the area was the natural start of a technological revolution^① based around silicon chips. This led to the birth of the name Silicon Valley.

In the 1970s, a number of small tech companies were set up. ² as hobby companies, they eventually became incredibly successful. This success encouraged rich people to put money in more and more new technology companies.

³ one of the best universities in the world, Stanford has been able to provide Silicon Valley with skilled graduates. Many of them go on to start technology companies.

Arun Sharma is an example of a Silicon Valley entrepreneur. ⁴ to find a job in an American tech company, Arun applied for a master's degree at Stanford. However, he quickly realized that he wanted to do something different after finishing his studies. ⁵ from Stanford, he instead decided to start a company with a friend.

Arun and his partner were both concerned about global issues. ⁶ to focus on the rich world, the two entrepreneurs chose to develop solar-power batteries for poor people in India. ⁷ this idea with a small number of customers, Arun believed that his idea would work. He is now looking for money to fund his idea and hopes to put his products into the market sometime next year.

D Writing

Come and study English this summer in the lovely seaside town of Morsham.

Four-week courses start on 14 July and 10 August.

Cost: £900 including room and board, and fun evening and weekend activities

Contact Morsham College for more details.

1 Study the advertisement above. Imagine that you want to take an English course in the UK. You need to write a formal email to Morsham College. You may prepare your writing by thinking about the enquiries^① below. Select three enquiries for your email.

- friend lives in Brighton—how far? weekend visit?
- never do sport—other evening activities?
- don't want to share a bedroom—cost more?
- want to have familiar food—Chinese food provided?

Hi there,

I saw your advert in English Now. Your courses sound cool. Please tell me more about room and board.

The advert says that you'll find me somewhere to stay. Will this be with an English family, or with other international students? It would be cool to stay with an English family because I could practise my English with them.

What's the food like? I'm not used to milk and ice cream. Are there any milk-free options at the café?

As I'm on holiday from 20 July to 3 September and I mustn't miss any days of school, I can't do either of your four-week courses. If I did the 10 August course for just three weeks, would it be cheaper?

Thanks a lot for your help. Please write soon!

Love,
Li Ming

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to find out more about the English language courses advertised in English Now.

Since my friend lives in Morsham, I have the choice of staying at her house. If I did not stay in the college, would the course cost less? How much would I have to pay for four weeks?

My school examinations have a lot of writing tasks. Therefore, I would like to work on my writing skills. Will your course give much help with writing?

The advertisement mentions fun evening and weekend activities. Please could you give me some information about these, including any trips that you organize?

I have to book my flight to England by the end of this month. As a result, I would be very grateful if you could reply as soon as possible.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Yours faithfully,
Zhang Hui

Globalization has a huge influence on all aspects of life, including language. Some languages spread across the world, while others become extinct. For decades, people across the globe have worked hard to protect the diversity of the world's languages and cultures.

In this section, you will first read a passage about the history of the English language. You will then watch a video about the role of English in different countries.

1 Study subheadings a–e, and match them to the paragraphs. Write the letters in the blanks.

- a What's next for English?
- b How did it become a world language?
- c Why English?
- d What is English, anyway?
- e How many English speakers are there altogether?

2 Complete the timeline according to the passage.

All you need to know about English

If you were travelling around the world and had time to learn only one language in addition to your mother tongue, which language would you choose? English, of course!

If you were only interested in talking to native speakers, Chinese would definitely be a better choice. Over 1.2 billion people speak Chinese as their first language, compared with less than 400 million who speak English. However, English would be very helpful if you weren't in China. You can usually find English translations at major tourist sites and airports all around the world. If you needed information from the Internet, English would be useful too. About 56% of all web pages are in English. What's more, English is an official language in over 50 different countries, which together cover more than 28% of all the land on our planet.

10 About 1.5 billion, about 20% of the world's population. That includes native speakers, people who are fluent speakers in countries where English is an official language, like India, Nigeria and Singapore, and all the people who have learnt it as a foreign language at school.

Several groups of people arrived in England in the fifth century CE, from Germany and Denmark. We now call them the Anglo-Saxons. English developed from different types of Germanic 15 languages that they spoke. Later, in the 11th century, the Normans^① from northern France took control of England, and about 10,000 French words became part of the English language. English also took lots of words from Latin, and some words from ancient Greek^② and other languages.

It started to spread around the world when the British went to live in North America in the 17th century, and later in Australia, New Zealand and South Africa. The British also took control 20 of parts of Asia, the Caribbean and Africa, and people there had to learn English. In the 20th century, the spread of English continued because people from all over the world wanted to exchange ideas with each other, in a wide range of areas such as trade, education and science.

Today, English is becoming the main language for lessons in more and more schools and universities around the world, because many believe that fluent English is very important for 25 people. It will help them communicate and make friends with people from other countries, and it will also give them more opportunities to learn and further develop their skills. In this century, at least, English as a global language is here to stay.

- 2 Have you ever heard of Ernest Hemingway and his works? How much do you know about his novel The Old Man and the Sea?

The Old Man and the Sea is one of Hemingway's most famous works. It tells the story of an old man called Santiago who goes out on the sea to fish. At this point in the story, he has finally caught a huge fish after 84 days of catching nothing. As the fish is too large to be carried on his little boat, he ties it along the side of it. However, he knows that he will face many dangers on the way home, because the blood from the wounds of the big fish could attract sharks. The fish is likely to become the target of attack.

This passage begins at the moment when a large shark approaches the fish. Can the old man survive a shark attack? Will he be able to fight off the bloodthirsty shark? Read and find out.

Ernest Hemingway
(1899–1961)

The old man took one look at the great fish as he watched the shark close in. I cannot keep him from hitting me, he thought, but maybe I can get him.

The shark closed fast on the boat and when he hit the fish the old man saw his mouth open and his strange eyes and his sharp teeth as he drove forward in the meat just above the tail. The old man could hear the noise of skin and flesh^① ripping^② on the big fish when he threw the fishing spear^③ into the shark's head at a place where the line between his eyes crossed with the line that ran straight back from his nose. There were no such lines. There was only the heavy sharp blue head and the big eyes and the powerful teeth. But that was the location of the brain and the old man hit it. He hit it with his wet, bloody hands driving a good spear with all his strength. He hit it without hope but with determination and complete hatred.

① excerpt /'eksɜ:pt/ n. 摘录; 节选

The shark turned over and the old man saw his eye was not alive and then he turned over once again, wrapping himself in the rope. The old man knew that he was dead but the shark would not accept it. Then, on his back, with his tail still moving and his mouth opening and closing, the shark swam over the water as fast as a speedboat. The water was white where his tail beat it and three quarters of his body was clear above the water when the rope broke. The shark lay quietly for a little while on the surface and the old man watched him. Then he went down very slowly. "He took about forty pounds," the old man said aloud. He took my spear too and all the rope, he thought, and now my fish bleeds again and there will be others. He did not like to look at the fish any longer since the shark had bitten it. When the shark had hit the fish, it was as though he himself were hit. But I killed the shark that hit my fish, he thought. And that was the biggest shark that he had ever seen. And he had seen big ones in his lifetime. It was too good to last, he thought. I wish it had been a dream now and that I had never caught the fish.

"But man is not made for defeat," he said. "A man can be destroyed but not defeated." I am sorry that I killed the fish though, he thought. Now the bad time is coming and I do not even have the spear. The shark is terrible and able and strong and intelligent. But I was more intelligent than he was. Perhaps not, he thought. Perhaps I was only better armed.

2 Read the summary below and fill in each blank with a suitable word based on the language of the passage. You may change the form if necessary.

The passage from The Old Man and the Sea is an exciting story about how an old man ¹ a shark. At the beginning of the passage, the old man was trying to bring back home his huge fish—his first after 84 days of catching ² ³ by the fish's blood, a huge shark appeared and began to ⁴ the big fish tied to the side of the little boat. The old man took his spear and ⁵ it deep into the shark's head. After that hit, the shark struggled hard to get away, ⁶ itself in the rope on the spear, and then jumped out of water with over three ⁷ of its body over the white waves. It was finally killed, sinking into the sea with the old man's spear and the broken rope. The old man was very tired after the ⁸ and became a little worried about the journey ahead: he had lost his only spear, and the fish was ⁹ again. He was certain that there would be more sharks to come. However, he was trying to tell himself that a man could be ¹⁰ but never be defeated. With this in mind, he was ready to face more challenges.

Deep reading

- 1 Read the passage again. Study sentences (1)–(4). They are simple in language but rich in meaning. Discuss the questions in pairs and complete the table. You may use the example below to help you.

He hit it without hope but with determination and complete hatred.

Guiding question: What did the writer mean by “without hope but with determination and complete hatred”?

You may ask and respond like this:

A: What do you think these simple phrases mean?

B: Which phrases?

A: “Without hope”, and “with determination and complete hatred”.

B: To me, “without hope” shows the old man was not confident that he would win against the shark.

A: I agree. What about “but with determination and complete hatred”?

B: Those tell us he continued fighting anyway because he hated the shark so much!

Sentences in the passage	My interpretations
(1) The old man knew that he was dead but the shark would not accept it. Guiding questions: What does “it” refer to? Why does Hemingway use “would” when he talks about the shark?
(2) ... my fish bleeds again and there will be others. Guiding question: What is the relationship between “my fish bleeds again” and “there will be others”?
(3) But man is not made for defeat. Guiding questions: What does it say about the old man’s attitude towards life? What does it say about humanity ^① in general?
(4) But I was more intelligent than he was. Perhaps not, he thought. Perhaps I was only better armed. Guiding questions: What did the old man mean by “perhaps not”? Do you agree that he won only because he was better armed?

Having a class discussion about challenges in life and how to deal with them

Imagine that your teacher is organizing a class discussion. The topic is “Deal with challenges in life”.

- Discuss the questions in groups.
Have you ever found yourself in a difficult situation?
How did you deal with it?
How did you feel about it?
- Share ideas within your group.
- Select one person to report on behalf of your group.

My experience

When I learnt to ride a bicycle, I had a problem. I didn't know how to maintain my balance. I thought it was easy as long as I could hold it straight. But when I practised, it seemed too difficult to control. It required all of my strength to keep it moving, but soon I fell off my bike. I failed, but it was hard to accept it. Later on, I carefully watched how my father kept his balance with his feet and hands. With more practice, I was finally able to ride a bicycle. I felt quite proud of myself.

B Grammar activity

The to-infinitive as the adverbial

To talk about a purpose or a result, we can use a to-infinitive.

(1) *He ran to catch the train.

(2) *He arrived at the airport in a hurry, only to find that the flight was cancelled.

⇒ Grammar reference 4 (p. 90)

1 Read the passage. Match to-infinitives 1–7 to grammar rules a and b. Then complete rule c.

In 2004, Yuan Longping received the World Food Prize. Thanks to his work, China's rice production has increased dramatically. How did he do it?

Yuan Longping was born in 1930 in Hubei. As a child, he was very interested in plants and other living things. He grew up ¹ to be a curious and hard-working plant scientist. Yuan wanted to solve the problem of food shortages, so he began conducting experiments ² to improve rice yields^① per hectare^② (10,000 m²).

Plants come in many different varieties: for example, some types of rice have long grains, while others have short grains. For centuries, people have been crossing different plant varieties ³ to create hybrids^③. Such plants proved to have desirable qualities from both parents. Yuan believed that it was possible to do the same with rice. He tried different ways of creating rice hybrids,⁴ only to discover that his attempts were unsuccessful.

Even though it often seemed too difficult ⁵ to complete this task, Yuan didn't give up. After many years of hard work, his experiments finally bore fruit. This was a major discovery since no one had previously been able to cross two different kinds of rice. It had a huge impact: the first hybrid rice variety increased China's rice production by 100 million tonnes in little over a decade.

Yuan didn't stop there—instead, he continued experimenting and created super hybrid rice with yields over 15 tonnes of rice per hectare. Thanks to Yuan's work, China became self-sufficient in rice. Our country continued to increase its rice yields ⁶ to become one of the biggest food donors^④ in the world. In 2019, he received the Medal of the Republic for his outstanding contributions. At the age of 90, Yuan Longping still hasn't retired. With a growing global population, the world needs to produce enough food ⁷ to feed everyone, and Yuan is working to make this happen.

- a The to-infinitive can be used to show the purpose of an action.
- b The to-infinitive can also be used to show a result.
- c If the result is negative, it is common to put the adverb immediately before the infinitive.

① yield /'ji:lɪd/ n. 产量; 产出 ② hectare /'hekteə(r)/ n. 公顷 (土地丈量单位, 等于 1 万平方米)

③ hybrid /'haɪbrɪd/ n. 杂交植物; 杂种动物 ④ donor /'dɔʊnə(r)/ n. 捐赠者; 捐赠机构

2 Rewrite the numbered parts using to-infinitives of purpose or result.

¹ In 1962, an Archaeology^① student named Fan Jinshi travelled the 2,400 km from Beijing to Dunhuang so that she could do an internship^②. She returned to Dunhuang after graduating and began working at the institute that would later become the Dunhuang Research Academy.

In those days, life in Dunhuang wasn't easy. ² When Fan arrived at the institute, she discovered that there was no electricity or running water. It was worth it, though. ³ With 46,000 square metres of wall paintings, there was so much art in the caves that archaeologists like her would be busy for years to come. Fan decided to make the academy her mission in life.

⁴ For over half a century, Fan studied the site, researched its history and worked tirelessly, making sure that it was protected. ⁵ She has also cooperated with international experts with the aim of encouraging further archaeological research. In 1998, she became the head of the Dunhuang Research Academy. ⁶ The Mogao caves are too far away from large cities, so they are not convenient for many tourists to visit. Luckily, one of Fan's initiatives has opened up the caves to a completely new audience online: the paintings have been digitized to give more people a chance to see them. In recognition of her great achievements, Fan received the national honorary title of Outstanding Contributor to Cultural Relics Protection in 2019.

3 Work in groups of four. Think about what your group members did today and guess why they did that. Write down three descriptions. Use the to-infinitive form to express a result or purpose in each of your descriptions. You may use the example below and the expressions in brackets to help you.

Li Ming took a taxi to school this morning to avoid being late.

- (1) (write ... take notes)
- (2) (close the window ... keep warm)
- (3)

Now check with your group members to see whether your guesses are correct or not, and report to the class.

- You may make a request like this: Li Ming, please check if my description is correct: Li Ming opened his school backpack to check if his cell phone was turned off.
- You may respond like this: You can't say that. I was just daydreaming. I didn't have any purpose when I opened my school backpack.
- You may report like this: I read my sentences to three classmates. None of them are correct. That means all my writing was based on my fancy imagination.

D Writing

(((Students' voices)))

Nowadays more and more people stress the importance of sports. Some students suggest having one more PE class every day. Write an essay to your school newspaper and express your opinions on the topic "Should students have one more PE class every day?"

1 Before you write, brainstorm some ideas and write them down. Think about the questions below.

(1) Are they closely connected with the topic?

(2) Are they the most interesting ideas?

.....

(3) Are there strong arguments and examples to support these ideas?

.....

2 Read the sample essay on the topic "The most important thing isn't winning a competition. It's taking part." Which conclusion from A–C best summarizes the writer's arguments? Why? Then complete the table on page 71 before you write.

"The most important thing isn't winning a competition. It's taking part." Do you agree?

by Liu Tiantian

1 In every competition, there are winners and losers. Some people think that anything except first place is a failure. Others believe that we should celebrate everyone's achievements equally. Which is more important, winning or taking part?

2 In my view, winning isn't the only way to be successful. Of course, you should always try to do your best, but you must be realistic. For instance, if you aren't very fit and have never taken part in a race before, then you probably won't win this time. You can't win every race, but you can always aim to be better than last time. If you arrived in 20th place last year, then finishing in fifth place this year is a great result.

3 In addition, not everyone wants to be the winner. People have different reasons for entering a competition. For example, in a big marathon race there are often professional athletes at the front and ordinary people at the back. The professional athletes' goal is to win, but for many ordinary people just finishing a marathon is a huge achievement.

4 On the other hand, it would be wrong if we didn't praise the winner's achievement more than everyone else's. Winning an important competition such as the Olympic Games often takes years of determination and hard work. However, there can only be one winner and the other people who take part in the competition are just as important to its success.

A To conclude, it is clear that taking part and winning are equally important. If you don't take part in a competition, you can never win.

B In summary, I think that winning is not important. Having fun in a competition is the only thing that matters.

C To sum up, I believe that people should be praised for winning a competition, but taking part and doing your best are more important.

E Cultural focus

It's not easy to attain success. In order to be successful and achieve important things, we need to hold firm to our beliefs and never give up.

In this section, you will first read a passage about people who accomplished great things despite enormous difficulties at the beginning. You will then watch a video about three table tennis champions who are working hard to reach the top.

1 Work in pairs. Discuss the questions.

(1) Who do you think has had a big impact on our country?

(2) Was it surprising that they were able to achieve what they did? Why or why not?

.....

2 Read the passage on pages 73 and find the key information in the success stories. Then complete the table.

A false start

Albert Einstein:
He started speaking at 4.
He couldn't read until 7.
He had learning difficulties.
He was expelled from school.

A successful end

He is one of the most important physicists of the 20th century.
He received a Nobel Prize in 1921.

A false start

Many who have achieved success started out as failures. Below are three of the most famous.

A late developer with a curious mind

Albert Einstein is perhaps one of the most intelligent men that have ever lived. However, people thought differently in the past. Einstein didn't start speaking until he was four years old and he couldn't read until he was seven. His teachers said he had learning difficulties and eventually he was expelled from school. Einstein went on to become one of the most important physicists of the 20th century and received a Nobel Prize in 1921.

He never knew success

One of the unluckiest artists in the world is the Dutch^① painter Vincent van Gogh. Only one person bought a painting from him during his life, and that person was a friend who paid very little money for it. However, the painter continued with his work and completed over eight hundred pictures before he died. Today, you can see his beautiful paintings in the most famous art museums in the world and they sell for a huge amount of money.

Hard work counts

Hua Luogeng (1910–1985) was one of the greatest mathematicians in China, but he didn't get an easy start: his family didn't have much money, so he couldn't afford to complete his education. However, Hua did receive the support of a dedicated teacher while he was at school. He loved maths and studied so hard that he managed to win a national abacus^② competition.

Then something terrible happened: because of a serious illness, his left leg became permanently paralysed^③. Despite this terrible setback, Hua continued to study on his own and develop his talents. When Hua discovered a mistake in an important maths paper, he was invited to work at Tsinghua University, and the rest is history^④.

① Dutch /dʌtʃ/ adj. 荷兰的 ② abacus /'æbəkəs/ n. 算盘 ③ paralyse /'pærəlaɪz/ v. 使麻痹; 使瘫痪

④ the rest is history 后来发生的事情众所周知

- is second time lucky
 - never knows success
 - has a curious mind but is a late developer
 - finds success after failing
- (2) The stories of Einstein and Vincent van Gogh tell us that
- people achieve great things even if others do not believe they can
 - great minds usually have learning difficulties when they were young
 - scientists and artists are very much alike
 - if one wants to be successful, one must learn how to overcome one’s own shortcomings^①
- (3) Which sentence can best summarize Hua Luogeng’s story?
- If you don’t start well, don’t give up.
 - A grateful heart is a beginning of greatness.
 - Giving back involves a certain amount of giving up.
 - It is not enough to have a good mind; the main thing is to use it well.

Grammar reference

1 Ellipsis

Ellipsis is leaving out one or more words in a sentence. This section will only discuss leaving out certain words from verb phrases.

1 Leaving out certain words from verb phrases after auxiliary verbs

We can leave out a verb phrase after auxiliary verbs (be, have, can, will, would, etc.) to avoid repeating words from a previous clause or sentence.

—Are you doing your homework?

—Yes, I am.

—Would any of you like to go shopping with me?

—I would.

A form of do is used if there is no auxiliary verb in the previous clause or sentence, or if the auxiliary is a form of do.
She plays the piano as well as her teacher does.

A form of the verb be is used if the main verb in the previous clause or sentence is be.

—Uncle Tom is kind to your children.

—He always is.

2 Leaving out the verb phrase from the to-infinitive

We can leave out a repeated verb phrase after the infinitive to or not to when it is clear from the context what we are talking about.

—I can't help you right now.

—I'm not asking you to.

If be is in the previous sentence or clause, the infinitive form of the verb be is repeated after to.

She was friendly to me, or at least she pretended to be.

After some verbs such as agree, ask, expect, forget, promise, refuse, try, wish, etc., we can leave out to.

My sister will come to visit me. She promised (to).

They asked me to help them and I agreed (to).

However, after negative forms of expect and wish, we don't leave out to.

I met Mary at the party, although I didn't expect to.

In clauses introduced by if and wh-words, we can also leave out to after want, like and would like.

You can go if you want (to).

You can do whatever you would like (to).

However, after negative forms of want, would like, and like, we don't leave out to.

—Let's go swimming.

—I don't really want to.

I had enough money to buy a new car, but I didn't like to.

After some verbs we don't leave out to. Words like this include be able, choose, deserve, fail, hate, hope, need, mean, prefer, advise, etc.

I'm sorry that I hurt you, but I didn't mean to.

2 The verb-ing form as the attributive and the adverbial

The verb-ing form is also called verb-ing participle or present participle.

He is singing.

Walking in the park yesterday, I saw a bird building a nest.*

- 1 The verb-ing form is used as an attributive, which can usually be replaced by a relative clause.

I know two boys having the same name. (= I know two boys who have the same name.)

The verb-ing form is used to indicate what somebody (or something) is doing (or was doing) at the time of speaking.

Do you know the girl drinking coffee over there? (The girl is drinking coffee.)

Look at the crowd waiting outside the city hall. (The crowd is waiting outside.)

The verb-ing form is used to say what something does all the time, not just at a particular time.

They are building a bridge connecting the two islands. (The bridge links the two islands.)

Can you think of a word beginning with the letter "C"? (The word begins with the letter "C".)

The verb-ing form is often used after there is (are) / there was (were) + noun phrase, etc.

There are some children playing football in the court.*

There was a man waiting outside just now.*

- 2 The verb-ing form is used as an adverbial, which can usually be replaced by an adverbial clause.

Walking down the street, Tom was hit by a motorcycle. (= When Tom was walking down the street, he was hit by a motorcycle.)*

Being ill, Mrs Smith won't come today. (= Since Mrs Smith is ill, she won't come today.)*

(1) The verb-ing form is used as an adverbial to indicate that the action in the adverbial and the main clause is carried out by the same subject, and is happening at the same time.

Feeling a little tired, he put down the book.*

They sat in the corner, talking happily.

The verb-ing form can also be used directly after a verb.

The child stood shivering in the rain.

Notice that the verb-ing form always describes an action performed by the subject of the main clause.

Walking to school, it started to rain. (X)*

Walking to school, I noticed that it started to rain. (✓)*

The verb-ing form can be used to say one action happens during another action. We usually use the verb-ing form for the longer action in the second part of the sentence.

Tom hurt his leg playing football.

Be careful riding a motorcycle.

The verb-ing form is also used after while or when.

Tom hurt his leg while playing football.

Be careful when riding a motorcycle.

(2) If we want to say that someone did one thing immediately after another, we mention the earlier action with the verb-ing form and the later action in the main clause.

Jumping out of bed, he dressed quickly and rushed to the door.

If we want to say one action happens before another action, having (done) is used for the earlier action.

Having located the hotel, we looked for a restaurant to have supper.

Having checked the letter twice, she sent it off.

We can also use after verb-ing.

After locating the hotel, we looked for a restaurant to have supper.

(3) If we want to explain the reason for a certain event, we say what happens in the main clause and give the reason with the verb-ing form.

The boy hid behind the closet, not wanting to be found by his mother.

(4) Preposition + verb-ing form is often used to avoid repeating the subject.

Since moving to Shanghai, Linda has made quite a few good friends. (Since she moved to Shanghai, Linda has made quite a few good friends.)

A passive form with being + verb-ed can also be used in this pattern.

After being caught cheating in the exam, he was required to see the head teacher.

Words commonly used in this pattern include:

after	against	before	besides	by	in
on	since	through	with	without

Before going out, remember to turn off all the lights.

You can improve your oral English by talking more with native speakers.

He made the decision without consulting his parents.

3 The verb-ed form as the attributive

The verb-ed form is also known as verb-ed participle or past participle.

It can be used as an attributive before or after a noun phrase to give information about someone or something. These forms are like defining relative clauses. It often has a passive meaning.

The newly painted room looks nice.

The car used by the president during the war is on display. (the car which was used by the president)

I have read a lot of dramas written by William Shakespeare. (dramas which were written by William Shakespeare)

The verb-ed form is often used after there is / was + noun phrase.

There is a red sports car parked outside.

4 The infinitive as the adverbial

An infinitive is the base form of a verb. The infinitive is most often used with to, such as to go, though sometimes we use the bare infinitive (infinitive without to).

An infinitive can be used as an adverbial.

(1) Infinitives can be used as adverbials to express purposes.

The prizes are given to honour those who have been devoted to their teaching careers.

A to-infinitive can follow in order or so as, to express a purpose.

In order to catch the train, he left the school in a hurry.

He left the school in a hurry in order to / so as to catch the train.

Some idiomatic infinitive phrases are used independently as an adverbial at the beginning or end of a sentence. These infinitive phrases include:

to be fair	to be frank (with you)	to begin with to conclude	to cut a long story short	to tell you the truth

To tell you the truth, I hate this movie.

(2) Infinitives can be used as adverbials to express reasons. They are usually used after adjectives that express feelings to explain the reason for the feelings. These adjectives include:

able	afraid	amazed	angry	anxious	astonished
careful	certain	clever	comfortable	cruel	delighted
difficult	disappointed	determined	eager	easy	fit
foolish	fortunate	free	frightened	glad	good
happy	hard	lucky	overjoyed	pleased	possible
proud	ready	relieved	right	sad	shocked
sorry	sure	surprised	unable	useless	willing worthy	wrong

He was angry to hear the news.

They were afraid to enter the old house.

(3) Infinitives can be used as adverbials to express results.

Tom came back to find everybody gone.

Infinitives are usually used to express results in these structures: so ... as to, such ... as to, enough to, only to, too ... to, etc.

Would you be so kind as to lend me 100 dollars?

Don't worry. Kitty is old enough to take care of herself.

She returned only to find that all the people had already left.

后 记

本教材根据教育部颁布的《普通高中英语课程标准(2017年版)》编写并经国家教材委员会专家委员会审核通过。

1997年底,上海市教委和课改委决定在“二期课改”中引进牛津英语教材进行改编并试验用。2005年原教材编写组依据课标对教材作成套修订,送审通过后于2006年始在全市范围内试用。该套教材对上海市英语教育教学水平、教师专业发展、学生英语语言能力和交际能力的提高作出了较大贡献,在这些方面所积累的宝贵经验是此次修订的主要基础和重要参考。本次修订也是对上海市“二期课改”重要成果的传承和发展。

本次教材修订使用了牛津大学出版社语料库中的部分优秀素材,在修订过程中牛津大学出版社的外籍专家帮助修改语篇、润色语言,在此表示衷心感谢。

修订过程中,上海市中小学(幼儿园)课程改革委员会专家工作委员会,上海市教育委员会教学研究室,上海市课程方案教育教学研究基地、上海市心理教育教学研究基地、上海市基础教育教材建设研究基地、上海市英语教育教学研究基地(上海高校“立德树人”人文社会科学重点研究基地)及基地所在单位上海外国语大学,编写组所在单位华东师范大学等单位给予了大力支持。此外,全市数十位高中英语教师、教研员和专家给我们提供了良好的教学试验机会和有价值的意见。在此表示衷心的感谢!
